

Speaker: Jennifer Chubb

Title: Complexity of orderability of groups

Abstract: A group is orderable if there is a linear ordering of its elements that is invariant under left and right multiplication. Whether or not a group admits such an ordering can be difficult to determine. We consider the algorithmic complexity of this (and related) questions within certain classes of groups.

This work is joint with Sam Roven (University of Washington).