Index Sets for Computable Differential Equations

D. Cenzer and J.B. Remmel

September 10, 2013

Abstract

Index sets are used to measure the complexity of properties associated with the differentiability of real functions and the existence of solutions to certain classic differential equations. The new notion of a locally computable real function is introduced and provides several examples of Σ_4^0 complete sets.