The WELLS Healing and Research Collective is seeking research assistants for two projects:

Healing Justice: The goal of our project is to assess the efficacy of a model of Black consciousness (Mosley, 2018) as an intervention for improving key psychosocial outcomes, critical consciousness development, and wellness among Black diasporic peoples in the face of anti-Black racism at the University of Florida and the Gainesville community.

Social Justice Activists Healing: The goal of our project to understand the processes of healing that college student activists experience while engaged in a social justice program, additionally, we aim to explore the extent to which these student activists expect to heal through engagement in a social justice program at a historically white institution.

Time commitment: 6+ hours/ week

If interested, please submit a resume, statement of interest (including a positionality statement) by October 11th, 2019 to lab coordinators, Garrett Ross or Jeannette Mejia at Garrett.ross@ufl.edu/ j.mejia@ufl.edu
